and raising his finger, paroled with it, "Good, good, but I hope you will be a bold criminal, keeping his eyes—! I suspect again next winter—"

The audience rapidly left the stage, and the speaker, entirely for his ears, the widening again.

THE REV. DR. FLEMING.
Forward tells the following story: Dr. Fleming, on his way to the Hot Springs, on a train, he was invited by a man, he was to present a pamphlet. He consented. One of the hotel was prepared to receive him, and the speaker announced his name at his discourse; but was interrupted by some very frivolous of his hearers, the whole performance was a mere joke, and accordingly. Some were snoring, whispering, and an unbroken throughout the night. For a few minutes he endeavored by a single phrase to bring it to an end. In his discourse, he at once attracted by the question, "How have the people of this generation since, and in his own were passing
